The Faculty of Russian Philology and Foreign Languages is delighted to invite you to participate in the International Scientific Conference of the Humanities “Language and Culture in the Modern World”, which will be held in April, 2016 in Pskov State University.

The necessity to organize this conference stems from the demands of the world community to solve the problems of peaceful co-existence and mutual enrichment of various cultures. The conference aims to assemble international researchers, experts, language and culture teaching professionals to share their expertise and research insights viewed from different perspectives.

We invite teachers of universities, colleges, schools, young scientists and post-graduate students. The conference is open to scholars and practitioners.

You can participate in our conference online.

Conference Languages: English, French, German.

Conference topics (not limited to):

- The dynamics of culture and identity. The world and national languages: the perspectives of their development, the role in the modern society. The interrelation of the language and culture
- Globalization and linguistic diversity: its nature and meaning
- The aspects of modern educational paradigm. The issues of theory and methods of foreign languages teaching
- Language and literature.
- The theoretical and applied issues of linguistics and translation
